January 2013

Greetings!

Did you know there is a valuable resource of information on issues important to investors right here in Minnesota? Did you know the same resource is an organization that can assist you in all of your reporting needs?

The Financial Planning Association of Minnesota (FPA of MN) is a nonprofit organization comprised of over 800 financial planners who specialize in a wide variety of financial disciplines. Members are experts in retirement planning, college planning, insurance, long term care, corporate savings plans, and many other aspects of the financial/retirement planning profession.

I have enclosed some information on the chapter for your review. If there is anything we can do to assist you, whether it is provide you with research, commentary and opinion, or help in generating story ideas, please call the FPA of MN office at the above number or call Kevin O'Laughlin, Public Relations Director at 952-253-2581. We are happy to help.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Jason Plank

What is the FPA?

FPA Primary Aim:

The Financial Planning Association® (FPA®) is the community that fosters the value of financial planning and advances the practice and profession of financial planning.

FPA is dedicated to facilitating the success of our members through leadership, advocacy, education and business development. We support the efforts of individuals who believe in and practice the financial planning process and share our Core Beliefs. The FPA is founded on four Core Values - Competence, Integrity, Relationships and Stewardship. We attract members who share our Core Values. FPA offers the tools and resources you need to advance in your career and grow your practice.

Members of the FPA are dedicated to helping people make wise financial decisions. The FPA believes that CFP® professionals are best suited to provide the objective advice needed to make smart financial choices.

The CFP® certification offers the public a consistent and credible symbol of professional competence in financial planning. The FPA benefits the public by helping to ensure that financial planning is delivered through competent, ethical financial planners.

Who are FPA Members?

Members include individual CFP® professionals, large financial services firms and their employees, attorneys, accountants, charitable giving specialists, insurance agents, stockbrokers, estate planners, mortgage professionals, and others who champion the financial planning process. They bring a diversity of backgrounds and experiences to the profession, gathering in close to 100 chapters.

The FPA's Corporate Members include corporations and other entities that provide products and services offered to or through financial advisers.

What is a CFP®?

What is a Certified Financial Planner™ (CFP®)?

A CFP® professional is an individual who has a demonstrated level of financial planning technical knowledge, experience in the field and holds to a client-centered code of ethics. A CERTIFIED FINANCIAL PLANNER™ professional can help you address a variety of financial needs. CFP® practitioners have pledged to put your interests before their own. Be wary of people who call themselves financial planners, but appear less interested in your real needs and goals and more interested in pushing financial products.

To earn the prestigious CFP® certification and remain certified as a CFP® professional, individuals must meet four main requirements:

Examination. They must successfully complete the CFP® Board and comprehensive certification examination, which tests the individual's knowledge across the disciplines of financial planning.

Experience. They must complete three to five years' financial planning-related experience before achieving the right to use the CFP® marks.

Ethics. They must voluntarily abide by the CFP Board's code of ethics and additional requirements as mandated. CFP® professionals who violate the code can be disciplined, including the permanent loss of the right to use the CFP® marks.

Education. Thirty hours of continuing financial planning and ethics education must be completed every two years.

Achievement and compliance in these four areas assures you that a professional who holds the CFP® certificate is well prepared and qualified to give you competent advice.

For reasons of competence and commitment to financial planning excellence, the FPA recommends the use of a CERTIFIED FINANCIAL PLANNER™ professional for your financial planning needs. There are also other credible designations such as the Chartered Financial Consultant (ChFC) and the Personal Financial Specialist (PFS), which have their roots in the financial disciplines of insurance and accounting.
